Northeastern University School of Law & CLBB Release Juvenile (in) Justice: The Role of Science and Advocacy in Juvenile Sentencing Post-Jones

Law students at Northeastern University School of Law under the direction of Professor Stevie Leahy investigated the current status of law and public policy in sentencing of juveniles. Supported by a partnership with CLBB and the Transformational Prison Project, the results are available as Juvenile (in) Justice: The Role of Science and Advocacy in Juvenile Sentencing Post-Jones. The project confirms great variability of law and practice among the states resulting in “justice by geography” with disconcerting variability in sentencing outcomes.
